havana, nov 29, reuter -- a 38-year-old man who broke into the venezuelan embassy sunday night in a bid for asylum, under a hail of bullets fired by cuban security guards, has left the embassy for his home following an agreement reached between venezuelan and cuban authorities this morning, a latin american diplomat said here.

the diplomat said that the cuban government had agreed not to take reprisals against the individual whose name has not been made public. the cuban left the refuge of the venezuelan embassy voluntarily, he said.

at present, there are 17 cubans in the venezuelan diplomatic mission in havana that have been granted asylum, three in the embassy, 11 in the ambassador's residence, and three, a married couple and a child, in a separate house.
